

Abstract of the Invention

A corneal marking device configured to indent and mark the surface of the cornea of the eye. Preferably, the indentation and marking are temporary in nature. Further, a method of marking the cornea of the eye.